I got emotional during K3G

Supernatural storyteller M Night Shyamalan speaks of Hindi movies and The Happening during his Mumbai stopover

Shradha Sukumaran
shradhas@mid-day.com

M Night Shyamalan can talk up a storm. Not the type that sometimes loom over the characters in his paranormal movies, but a torrent of words that greet questions thrown at him by the press.

Talking shop

The Hollywood director is in India to receive the Padmashri and he spent a day in Mumbai yesterday, promoting his new movie, a UTV Studio collaboration, The Happening.

No, his "real" name isn't Manoj Shyamalan Nair ("In fact, that's the first I've heard of it"). He likes Bollywood movies for their "heightened emotions". He'd love to act in a movie where he played just the neighbour, not "the Indian". The Happening is "really, really scary". And despite the harsh reviews that Unbreakable and his big flop The Lady In The Water received, he'd first save those two over his others if his collection were stuck in a burning building.

Looking spiffy in a dark-grey suit, the 37-year-old director of movies like The Sixth Sense and Signs first launched into a mini autobiography. Completely animated, he answered each question casually and often, with a touch of humour. What's more, when cameramen threatened to ambush the stage for a closer look at this Hollywood A-lister, he nonchalantly sat down and acquiesced.

Making exceptions

The Pondicherry-born director is visiting India after nine-and-a-half years. Night, as he prefers to be called, says that he made an exception for the Padmashri. "I don't usually attend award functions, but I liked the fact that this was a cultural event," he said.

Film talk

But his most uninhibited reaction came to the inevitable Bollywood question. His introduction comes via his wife Bhavna and mother Jaya, both Hindi movie buffs. "I've seen three movies," he grinned, then after prodding, added, "One was Kabhi...yes, Kabhi Khushi Kabhie Gham. I got emotional for that. Then there was a supposedly salacious film at the time; yes, Satyam Shivam Sundaram. And Devdas!"
